you will find disorder. yesterday morning came Calladen. but in so much haste that he could not stay or hover to get I was forced to get a coach & go always for away with him to him we spent him by to speak in him with which & would him with had to say to him although at first he was very shy yet after I had used all my arguments to him that I would fight for me. he became so extremely willing to undertake my service & he gave more to confer me. me then I could expect it but first I must go to Holland for he had no time at all, he is so extremely watchful ^{myself} 38. that he is not puffed to go out of his sight - hardly expect all of into the orders where I now am. he says he is of short lea-world. he would doubtless to him a mischief. Calladen says that at present he is bound in by troops has hindered him from he and so wisely he would have been. but now upon a dislike of his employment it being brought. he is quitting it & will be with three or four days. & he goes to Hague & clarifies a life more close & less trouble to him & to serve the in an other kind. but he proposes to give it that he to do more effectually what I desire he had long that she shall have much ado to be not so good as that order; but if doubt of having received, so of all I ought to to be. However he will give up his days, or his life, for you are, no other than I never perceived by past experience to design the same self. why? And yet are in to give
